

“It’s beginning to look a lot like Christmas”

Starlight Garden in Tokyo Midtown

As you may or may not know, there are currently Christmas lights (or “illuminations” as they are called here) all over Tokyo. This week I got the chance to go and see the illuminations in Roppongi, and Marunouchi.

There are many lights in Roppongi, but I was only able to see the light display in Tokyo Midtown. The light display here was beautiful, especially the light show to music called, “Starlight Garden”. Later in the week, I went to the Kitte building in Marunouchi where I saw a white Christmas tree that was 14.5m tall! It was so big, and the hangings from the ceiling made it look like it was snowing. On Naka Street, near the Kitte building, all the trees were covered with white lights. It looked magical! In another building in Marunouchi, I was surprised to find a small skating rink. I love skating, so this made me very excited. I was so happy that I got the chance to go to see the lights, and hope that I will be able to see more soon.
